Marine Fish Habitats

SOUTHERN SPECIES

1 Seagrass - Seagrass beds are important habitats for many marine fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

2 Soft-bottom habitats - Soft-bottom habitats like mudflats and sandbars are important for many fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

3 Rocky reefs - Rocky reefs are important habitats for many marine fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

4 Artificial structures - Artificial structures like jetties and piers can provide important habitats for many fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

5 Submerged vegetation - Submerged vegetation like eelgrass and widgeon are important habitats for many fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

6 Wetlands - Wetlands are important habitats for many fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

7 Intertidal zones - Intertidal zones are important habitats for many fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

8 Shallow water habitats - Shallow water habitats like mangroves and salt marshes are important for many fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

9 Deep water habitats - Deep water habitats like seagrass beds and soft-bottom habitats are important for many fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

10 Offshore habitats - Offshore habitats like reefs and seamounts are important for many fish species. They provide shelter and food for fish, and help to improve water quality.

Remember! No habitat = No fish!

FISHING AT THE BEACH

Is there anything better than a fresh hot chip sandwich?! That was how we ended our Saturday adventure to Shorncliffe. We started with a fishing experience with '2 Bent Rods' and then enjoyed a play on the beach, the weather was perfect!

On Saturday night we celebrated another birthday with a cake we baked and decorated that morning.

BUSH ADVENTURE DAY

On Sunday morning we got our walking shoes, hats and sunscreen on and went for an adventure bush walk at Godwin Beach. We explored the mangroves and discovered lots of different bird nests and insects. We enjoyed morning tea and a play at the park and then headed home for lunch and a chilled afternoon.
